Within the last few years (says The Times) there has been a singular development of the tea trade at the port of Marseilles. In 1859 the arrivals did not exceed 12,000 kilogrammes, most of which came from the warehouses of the Hanseatic towns and from London. Ten years later the direct relations with the East caused a great movement of tea to Marsellies, the annual im ports being 229,114 kilogrammes, of which 223,813 came directly from China. Since then the trade has been very greatly on the increase the quantity for 1881 being 3,198,430 kile provided. Some time ago the teaching of grammes, of which 2,878,675 were from China. Of this quantity 52,593 kilogrammes were for home consumption, the duty upon which amounted to Ill,471f. The imports of tea for the whole of the French ports were 3,572,268 kilogrammes:

> A Californian paper says :-- "It is related of a Chinese fisherman that not long ago he was angling in Maps River and jerked up some small fish on his line. In extricating it from the hook with mouth open, at the moment it was released it flopped head first into his open mouth. Chinaman made a desperate effort to get it out, and shoved the fish further down his throat. He closed his jaws and smothered it to death, but afterwards, when attempting to get it from his month, the spines in the fins and along the back would be erroted and present an impediment he could not overcome. In his desperation be sought the advice of his fellow-Mongolians, who concluded that as the fish would not some out it must go in, and they forced it down his throat.

What then was his amaze. ment when he discovered that the roots had got the prize, as fine specimens, not of their own family, but of horse-radish! Is it possible that there was too much green in the produce in question, or something too much of a verdant bue in the orbs of the eminent judge? I will not pursue the enquiry further.

And we have forcasional "At Homes" at Government House, which are always fairly pleasant, but somehow, I cannot tell you why it is, there seems generally a want of life and anirit about them. One fault, doubtless, is that we are unfortunate in our A.D. C. We are told that he is a very poor fellow by those who know him personally, and I am quite willing to believe it, but he must really pardon me when I say that he is not good officially. Take one or two instances in point. It is a small dance at Government House, there are the usual number of charming ladies, good dancers and good-natured too, willing to sacrifice adance or so with their favourite partners to gratify some solitary stranger who would like to dance ing on business in Ludgate-hill appeared to com. of naval men, English and foreign, standing gazing longingly at the door, many would like to dauce, some are dying to do so, but they know no one, and cannot be introduced because there is no one to introduce them. Where is the A. D. C. P you will say. He is enjoying himself. somewhere in his own way. Then again, thore is a weekly afternoon reception on Wednesdays, which might be so pleasant, but which is stiff, formal, and almost looked upon as a necessary task, to be got through because it must be done, instead of looked forward to as a pleasure. And why? The fault is not in Lady Weld or any. of the family, for they are all much liked individually and collectively. Where then is the fault? There is no "go" about it, it is so flat, so dismal. The A. D. C. surely might do something to make it more lively. It only wants some one to lead the way, others would soon follow. Instead of a straight row of chairs placed one against the other, a few distributed here and there; instead of sitting silently and sadly listen-

It the stranger be a lady, and alone, she must be prepared for nervous work, for she will find no one to assist her or support her in apy but seems interminably long, feeling herself she bones to find the lady she is in quest of. But she does not know, if she can find her, for she has never met her, and indeed never seen embarrassment. Surely an efficient A.D.C. would be there to step forward and say some has become of the Postal Service that was to' be little word to relieve her nervousness. But no; organised in that country. 2.30 P.M. Post Office closes, but Correspondence may be posted on board the Packet with Late Fee of 10 cents extra Postage until the time of departure. MONEY LETTERS.

Public attention is called to the following extract from the Hongkong Postal Guide, Paragraph 60:-"The Post Office declines all responsibility for unregistered Letters containing Bank Notes &c., and, where Registration has been neglowed, WILL MAKE NO ENQUIBIES into alleged lossos of such letters."

Boxes of letters are sometimes received at the Post Office not sealed, that is to say, the box is fastened with sealing wax, but there is no impression of a scal. The attention of boxholders is called to the necessity of carefully sealing such hoxes with some recognisable seal, and of sending a chitbook or receipt with them. The omission of the latter precaution leaves a doubt as to whether the contents of the box ever reached the Post Office; the emission of the former, as to whether part of them might not have been abstracted for the sake of the Postage Stamps.
